As a member of the firm's Litigation Practice, Jared Abrahams supports senior litigators and clients on a variety of litigation matters, including contract and business disputes, as well as employment disputes.

His experience includes sitting second chair at trial, handling mediations, negotiating settlements, drafting pleadings and settlement agreements, and reviewing, drafting, and summarizing discovery productions. Jared also handles commercial matters including reviewing and drafting sales representative and distribution agreements, terms and conditions for the sale of goods and services, as well as assisting clients with data privacy compliance.

Jared began his legal career at a national Am Law 200 firm, where he worked on defense litigation matters involving complex tort and general liability disputes. Jared also had prior experience at a global accounting firm, where he worked in their international tax services group, conducting research to help determine the U.S. tax consequences for foreign entities and their shareholders. This background provided a solid foundation for understanding compliance and tax matters affecting foreign subsidiaries.
